1. Many citizens in the village of Kosale near the Yugoslav border were arrested for being pro-Tito. The villagers rebelled against the police, and the latter were obliged to call on the Militia for assistance.
 2. In the village of Lokva (D-6440), the civilian population was transferred from the border area by order of the military authorities because fortifications were about to be built in this area.
 3. As a result of Titoist propaganda many Bulgarians are taking refuge in Yugoslavia. These refugees are always well received; however, after a while they become convinced that "one regime is as good as another".
